Treasury Clerk Is Careful; Needs Be

Signs 250 Billion of United States Checks.

WASHINGTON. — Guy Fletcher Allen is a very careful man. After all, a man who has signed 250 billion government checks in 12 years has to be careful.

That's part of the reason he's kept a record—every year since 1913 —of every penny he's spent. When he retires in the near future, the chief disbursing officer of the U. S. treasury will have used up the 32nd of a series of little black books for that personal record.

The men who work with the tall, quiet, 64-year-old treasury official say he's no penny-pincher. Allen says the same. But he points out:

"When your friends raise a look at the size of the bond, handling hundreds of thousands of checks—this year it will be about 120,000,000 — they just automatically make you treasurer of the lodge or club or neighborhood association.

"My records have helped me keep their money separate from mine. It's a rut, but not such a bad one."

In 44 years with the treasury his office has only made one little mistake—the government wrote out a check for $1,000,000 more than the $19 that was due.

It never was cashed, of course, but it made a pretty good story about four years ago.

The check was to be paid to a farmer. After signing for the regular operator of the check-writing machine, punched the million-dollar column by mistake. Out came the check for $1,000,019.

A watchful checker caught it and turned it back for correction. But it must have been a Jonah, for out it went again to a very surprised farmer.

As a joke, he said, he took it to the local bank and there an amazed teller, with one foot feeling for the bank alarm, phoned the secret service.

They came and picked up the check. And when they investigated it, one treasury clerk explained:

"Oh, yes, I saw it. But I thought no one could make a mistake of $1,000,000."

Ducks and Geese Cannot Fly in Moulting Season

NEW YORK. — Few hunters realize that fast flying ducks and geese actually cannot fly for a period of several weeks during the summer.

The explanation for this oddity has been given by Charles E. Gillhan, noted former government biologist, now chief of the Western Winchester Sportsmen's service bureau of Olin Industries, Inc.

The reason is simple, reveals Gillham who spent almost 20 years studying wild life. The annual flight period occurs during their moulting season, which also coincides with the period when the young are in their downy stage and are growing their flight feathers, says Gillham.

In any other place but the far north, it would be fatal for flyers, young or old, to be without wings. Nature provides protection to the flightless by allowing them to dive to escape their enemies and by giving them 24 hours of daylight which they spend in uninterrupted feeding.

This is nature's provision to enable the birds to grow with tremendous rapidity in the short intervals between the thaw and freezing of the lakes and streams of the far north.

Claim 450 Miles an Hour For New 'Flying Swordfish'

SEATTLE. — A fast new fighter plane with a long propeller hub that makes it look a bit like a swordfish in flight was announced by the Boeing Aircraft company. It said that the ship could go more than 450 miles per hour.

The overlong hub mounts the two propellers which operate in tandem off the single 3,600-horsepower, air-cooled engine, rotating in opposite directions.

Boeing called it the most versatile aircraft ever manufactured. It said the plane could carry 6,400 pounds of bombs or two one-ton torpedoes, intercept or attack, and had a service ceiling comparable to the B-29 Superfortress.

MISSOURI SNOW SHOVELERS

WASHINGTON. — The problem of snow removal from the sidewalks around the "Summer White House" created something of a problem just before President Truman paid his Christmas visit to Independence, Mo.

At first nothing was done about the snow around the Truman mansion. Secret service agents guarding the house said it was their job to guard, not to shovel. Finally Senator [illegible] Hollis, aged 59, got out his horse Dick, aged five, and with a home-made snow plow cleared the snow from the North Delaware street side of the Truman home. But he didn't have time to clear the West Van Horn road side because he had to clear the walks used by children.

One day before Mrs. Truman arrived, however, George Dodsworth, president of the Independence chamber of commerce, called out the chamber's six new directors. He told them that the snow around the "Summer White House" would have to be cleared and their initiation into the chamber would be to do the job.

They did a good job. The walks around the Truman home were thoroughly shoveled.

They did not, however, tackle the drive in the rear of the house. So next morning, two employees from the highway department arrived to clear the driveway. They had shoveled for about 20 minutes when the first lady appeared on the back porch.

"You are shoveling gravel on the grass," admonished Mrs. Truman, always a meticulous housekeeper.

There were some explanations that they had been sent by the highway department to clear the snow.

"I don't care who sent you," replied Mrs. Truman. "I want you to quit."

Which is exactly what they did.

Mrs. Truman left instructions with a secret service agent not to let anyone shovel snow from the drive. And no one has.

THE OTHER LaFOLLETTE.

When the name LaFollette is mentioned in Washington, people usually think of the senator from Wisconsin, who succeeded his crusading bull-moose father. But another LaFollette, from Indiana, not Wisconsin, who sits in the house of representatives, not the senate, is also attracting more and more attention.

Emile Gabels fill up quickly when Rep. Charles LaFollette takes the floor for a speech. Colleagues may sometimes disagree with the unsophisticated Indiana Republican, but they agree that what he says usually is interesting and never fails to pack a wallop.

In fact, one of his recent speeches packed such a wallop that conservative colleagues on the Republican side almost swooned. For LaFollette attacked that super-sacred cow, states' rights, and argued that he was through had virtually de-horned the animal.

"There are no such things as states' rights," declared the red-headed Hoosier. "There are rights of citizens who live within a state. The man who speaks of state sovereignty speaks the language of totalitarianism. There is only individual sovereignty."

Colleagues on both sides of the aisle listened in amazed silence. Only congressmen to answer were two Republicans: Jensen of Iowa and Bates of Massachusetts. Significantly, no whispers came from southern Democrats.

"Did not the sovereignty of the states exist long before the federal government was established?" asked Bates.

"Yes, but man existed long before the state of Massachusetts," shot back LaFollette. "The state of Massachusetts did not create its citizens and does not own them. The citizens own the state. In the continental congress and the convention which created the constitution . . . the issue was not states' rights.

"The issue was, 'Shall the people determine that they can be better served by a (federal) government with power over the state.' That is the constitutional answer, and it is the only answer that parallels with any idea of the innate dignity and honor of mankind. From that premise I do not yield, nor shall I ever yield, God giving me the strength to retain my intellectual, moral and spiritual integrity."

CAPITAL CHAFF.

Since publication of General Marshall's letter to Governor Dewey telling how we were cracking Japanese and German codes, every major government has been changing its codes almost daily. In addition, the best cryptographers in the world are now hard at work in every capital trying to figure out new unbreakable codes. All suspect we have broken their codes too. . . . The row between Mayor Maestri of New Orleans and Jimmy Comiskey was patched up at a secret caucus.

Tuck Inaugurated Governor of Virginia In Richmond Wed.

Richmond, Va. Jan. 16. (Special to the Times-Virginian) Virginia's new Governor, from South Boston ex-Marine, former delegate, senator and Lieutenant Governor William Tuck, along with the new Lieutenant Governor, L. Preston Collins, of Marion, took office today (Wednesday) to the accompaniment of the boom of guns and the applause of hundreds gathered to do them honor.

In a brief inaugural message entirely without any legislative recommendations, since they will be given to the General Assembly in a separate message on Monday, Governor Tuck paid tribute to the retiring Governor, Colgate W. Darden, Jr., before launching into matters of state welfare . . . the preservation and improvement of state and local government, higher standards for public schools, competent and adequately staffed health units, periodic examination of school children, and the importance of keeping Virginia an agricultural state.

Calling attention to the national trend toward usurping of state functions, Federal regulation of local affairs and the danger of large Federal grants, Governor Tuck said, "I am convinced that the making of grants to the states by the federal government should be vigorously opposed by all the states so long as the operations of the Federal government persist in incurring an annual deficit. However," he said in the future, "if the time comes when, consistent with sound financial policies, the making of such grants can be justified, then no purposed conditions, or restrictions should be attached but each state should be free to spend its share for such purposes as its best interests require."

"I would encourage the desire for improvements in schools," said Governor Tuck, "and those other functions of the government which serve our needs and improve our citizenship, but I would have this desire coupled with the realization that these improvements must be paid for through taxation, and with the willingness on the part of all of us to pay for them."

LIBRARY NOTES

"THE SILVER ANSWER"
by Rhoda Hoff

"The Silver Answer" is the story of the lives of Paul Magnier, a Catholic priest and the girl, Margaret, who were forced to part. The book opens in Paris, France, later changing to Connecticut, U. S. A., and Northern Indiana.

Paul struggled against the temptation of leaving the Church because of his love for Margaret. Margaret tried to build a new happiness in her marriage to Andre, but failed, thus giving all her love to Paul.

I have found this book very interesting and I am sure others will find it just as interesting. The author has made each character live. It also teaches the lesson of the power to resist temptation, and to give up one's all to God.

Harwood Plans Retirement As Bank Cashier

Charles Crawley Coming To Farmers Bank Feb. 15

T. [illegible] m-Virginian learned today that Charles F. P. Crawley will return to Appomattox and as of February 15 will accept a position with the Farmers National Bank. We are also informed that A. R. Harwood, cashier of the bank, plans to retire as cashier in a few months, and at such time will be succeeded by Mr. Crawley.

At the recent annual meeting, the bank directors re-elected Mr. Harwood as cashier, but he has advised the bank of his intention to retire as cashier this spring to devote his time to his other business interests here. Mr. Harwood has served as cashier of the Farmers National Bank since the institution was organized in September, 1918. His sound management has had its part in the growth of the bank and his announcement of his plan to resign comes at a time when the institution has deposits of well over one million dollars and has built up its resources to an all-time peak. Mr. Harwood plans to continue as cashier for from two to three months after February 15, and then to continue as a member of the bank's board of directors.

Mr. Crawley will return to Appomattox from Washington. For the past several years he has held an important position as investigator with the United States Civil Service Commission. He is an attorney and before going to Washington was assistant trial justice for Appomattox County and formerly served on the Appomattox town council. He is the son of Professor and Mrs. L. Crawley. His wife is the former Miss Louise Stratton. They have two children.

Mrs. Jessalyn H. Drinkard will continue as assistant cashier.

Plan Frozen Food Locker Unit Soon In Appomattox

Road Condition Shows Result of Winter Weather

The month of December, 1945, was one of unusual severity with respect to weather conditions and for almost the entire month there was snow on the ground of the major portion of the state, and temperatures well below freezing were consistent during this period. The result of these conditions on the lightly surfaced and unsurfaced highways of the Primary and Secondary State Highway Systems was anticipated by the State Highway Department, and since the return of temperatures above freezing, is being realized.

Of the approximately 47,000 miles of road in both systems, about 17,000 are either unsurfaced or very lightly surfaced. These roads are now, due to the thawing out process, becoming very soft, and in case of the unsurfaced roads, in many places, impassable. This condition is distressing but in many instances cannot be corrected except by long continued spells of temperature above freezing and sufficient sunshine.

Every possible means will be used by the Department of Highways to afford relief, but there still remain thousands of miles of road which can be relieved only by the assistance of nature.

Wherever these conditions occur, the citizens affected are urged to promptly get in touch with the local Resident Engineer of the county to see what can be worked out by cooperative means. The man-power situation in the state is still acute and for these extraordinary repairs the Department must look to the aid and cooperation of the citizens of the various sections.

The Department maintains Residency Offices at Appomattox for Appomattox and Campbell Counties.

Plans are being completed for the erection and operation of a modern frozen food locker plant at Appomattox, it was announced today by Ivey Holland. Although the exact location has not been definitely decided upon, it will be in an area that will be convenient to both rural and town patrons.

Present plans, on which bids for the machinery, insulation and equipment are being received, will accommodate 550 lockers with a capacity of more than 6 cubic feet per locker. A locker this size will conveniently store 300 pounds of meats, vegetables, poultry, game, fruit and berries. With proper planning by the housewife the locker will afford a wide variety of high quality meats, vegetables and fruits for serving during the out-of-season periods.

Some of the services to be offered the patron will be the chilling and ageing of meats and poultry to bring out its best flavor and to tenderize it. The cutting of meats into table size cuts, wrapping and sealing in moisture-proof paper, labeling and hard freezing [illegible] the patron's locker, which is individually keyed and numbered. The processing of fruits and vegetables as well as packaging, labeling, freezing and storing [illegible] will be offered. This modern food preservation will do away grinding, curing and smoking of pork if desired. A poultry processing service will be available.

This type enterprise offers many advantages to both rural and urban families. For the farm family it makes possible the slaughter of meat animals and poultry when they are in the best condition regardless of the season. The vegetables, fruits and berries can be processed and kept in garden fresh condition for future use.

The urban family can purchase these items at a saving and have them processed and stored in their locker for future use. Patrons will be able to process their own vegetables and fruits at home, with instructions from the operator, and deliver to the plant for freezing and storage in their locker.

Government figures indicate that the average family can make a saving of from $50 to $100 per year by using the locker plant fully. The lockers will rent from $12.00 to $15.00 per year (barely more than the cost of a three-cent stamp a day), depending on the location and type of locker. Processing charges will be comparable to those charged by other plants in the state and will be announced later, in this paper. It is contemplated that the plant will be managed by a local citizen, who will have received special training offered by several schools for plant operators and managers.

The owner is now in position to begin construction as soon as he can be assured that a minimum of 400 families in the county and surrounding towns will agree to use the locker for a period of one year.
